Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Friday 25 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly cloudy with some heavy rain, but northwest brighter.

Today:
Dry with sunny spells across the northwest and later western and central parts, otherwise a mostly cloudy day with outbreaks of rain. The rain heaviest and most persistent in the east, especially the southeast. Cool northerly winds.

Tonight:
Northern Isles and the west and northwest, dry with clear spells. Elsewhere mostly cloudy with outbreaks of rain, occasionally heavy in southeast, the rain tending to become lighter, patchier overnight.

Saturday:
Western and northern Scotland dry with sunny spells, but eastern parts remain rather cloudy with occasional rain, still the odd heavier burst possible in the southeast. Northeasterly winds easing.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Plenty of dry, increasingly warm, weather with sunny spells through the coming days. Risk of a few showers in the south Sunday and patchy rain in far northwest at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.